WEEDY CLOVER SEED

(from The Seed World)

“Buckhorn, dock and pigweed seeds—weed seeds commonly contaminating clover seed—produce many times more seed for each seed sown than the clover seed, making it vitally important that none but scrupulously clean clover seed be sown, says Samuel M. Jordan, weed and seed specialist of the Missouri State Board of Agriculture.

For each clover seed sown one may expect to harvest 30 clover seeds; for each seed of buckhorn, 2,400 seeds of its kind; for each seed of dock, 50,000 dock seeds; and, for each pigweed seed, 1,000,000 weed seeds of this kind.

From the foregoing facts, it is easy to see, Mr. Jordan says, that it is better to sow no clover seed at all than to sow a lot of weed seed with it.”
